WAYNE MCGREGOR: ON THE OTHER EARTH

An immersive installation, experienced within a 360° 3D screen, refracting, evolving, and reimagining sound and dance performance in a startlingly original new form.

Set within a radically immersive, panoramic, 360-degree stereoscopic, nVis screen, where 3D imagery is experienced within a large-scale cylindrical architecture of eight metres wide and five metres tall. Combining dance, digital imaging, spatialised sound, and AI, McGregor once again redefines how we think about movement, the body, and performance.

On The Other Earth breaks the fourth wall as visitors are invited into the heart of the dance, connecting in close contact with the hyperreal dancers of Company Wayne McGregor and the Hong Kong Ballet in a physicalised sound environment designed by Invisible Mountain. Never encountered in the same way twice, groups of up to 20 people will experience On The Other Earth's visual and sonic landscapes unfolding before them in a series of thought-provoking otherworldly encounters and intimate interplay, upending our perceptions of performance and the future of entertainment.

Stone Nest

Stone Nest is an arts organisation and performance venue in the heart of London's West End, bringing exceptional and experimental art to a wide audience.

The iconic grade II listed 19th century Norman Style Welsh Chapel, built in 1888 by James Cubitt, is an atmospheric venue with a vibrant history. After many years at the heart of the London Welsh community, the chapel closed for worship in 1982 and was transformed into the legendary Limelight Nightclub.

below Stone Nest

In the basement of a 19th Century Welsh chapel, ambient and candle lit, lies below Stone Nest. Characterised by its pared back walls, below has been sensitively reimagined by Jermaine Gallacher, Editor-in-Chief of Ton magazine and British Vogue Contributing Interiors Editor.

With a highball focused cocktail menu and a delicious selection of snacks and plates, the bar is the brainchild of esteemed Boxer brothers, Frank and Jackson.
